[Translation]

The Provinces of Ireland.

Each Munster chief is a beautiful flower,
The weak man's dauntless, defending power To a land overflowing with money and beoit It shelters and succours the poor evermore.

On Leinster's plains what voices of revelry, What fleet-footed steeds! what pillars of chivalry,
How musical, mirthful, and gentle each maiden,
Whose heart is with honour and nobleness laden.

'Twas easier to reckon the leaves of Than the ^{the led} beautiful maids and high chieftains that be In Ulster - grand home of brave steeds and warriors, Thy shields and thy quick swords are Liberty's barriers.

Fair Connacht were praised, tho' hushed in the tomb I lay, I land without fault, thou never lookest gloomily,
For the children of song gold and honour are therein,
And 'tis Connacht's the wheat of our green pleasant Erin.

Nouns compounded of two substantives always retain the gender of the latter word; as bagairc, a queen, from bean, a woman, and airc, a king, is of the masculine gender; but píofíbean is feminine.

Vallancey's Irish Grammar

Of the Declension of Nouns.

Substantives whose nominatives end in ī, always terminate the genitive in ž; as mayic, a monk, gen. an mayaz̄, of the monk.

When the nominative ends in 8 it terminates so throughout all the cases except in the dative and ablative plural.

When the nominative ends in a8, the 8, upon variation, is changed into ī, and the a is transposed; as rezaggād, a tongue, plural rezaggia, tongues.

"Go m-beanuige Eja Supt, God save you, may God give you a blessing, our national salutation, expressive of the religious feelings of our people; and the reply, go m-beanuige Eja'zup Muspe Supt, tells how our fathers loved, in the polite interchanges of civility to unite the name of the Virgin Mother - Muspe - with that of her Divine Son; and in thus asking a blessing through her who is "the channel of all graces" raised the words of civility to the dignity of prayer, and the poverty of mere expression very often to the richness of merit. When compared with this, how cold our English

"good morrow" and "how do you do?" appear!"

Most Rev. Daniel O'Connor,

Bishop of Saldes.

It is unnecessary to note as long, by means of the accent, the diphthongs eo, eu, ya, ua, or even ui, since they are by nature already long. This mistake is not uncommon.

Personal nouns end in ope, sip or up, derived from other nouns; opp (derived from verbs), and sc; as ceslgaſſe, cesamysde, molcopp, bscas.

Abstract nouns, derived commonly from adjectives or other nouns, end in sr, esr, sic; as Ceslgaſſ, maſceſr, realgaſſ-erſr.

Other abstract nouns derived from adjectives end in e, and are in form like the genitive singular feminine; as fyrre, appde.

Derivative adjectives end in sioſt, map, sc, yd, ſa or ða, and ca; as rigeapraimad, peoplimap, Fyrrenyead, Ffrecca (righteous).
